

Aviator Scenarios

Segment 1

What type of adventure would you like to have as an airplane pilot? Tell me when you hear what you would like to do.

Options: Would you like to break records flying high? Would you like to do aerial tricks? Would you like to be the first to fly the furthest? Do you want to fly at night?

Segment 2 Take off

Question: What type of plane would you like to pilot?

Options: big, long, short, fast, seaplane

Your plane lifts off the runway. The long wings stretching out across the sky like an eagle. Your plane soars and circles high in the air.

Your plane is long and sleek. As you speed down the runway you imagine that the plane is moving down the runway as fast as a cheetah.

Your plane is huge! The largest of all planes. As the plane picks up speed, you imagine it has the strength of a gorilla running through the jungle. You picture the gorilla jumping as the plane lifts off the ground.

Your plane is short and feels light as you float on the water before you take off. You think that this must be how a penguin feels as they slide on ice gliding toward the sea. The penguin slides off the mountain diving for the water as your plane pulls up reaching for the sky.

The old runway feels crumbly underneath the wheels of your plane. As you take off you hear the crunching of the pebbles as your plane picks up speed.

Segment 3

What type of day would you like to fly your plane in?

Options: Sunny, Stormy at night, Rainy, Windy

The sky seemed painted in sunshine today. With sunlight filling each cloud like a bright light bulb.

The flash of light surprised you as it lit up the night like a thousand flashlight that just turned on at the same time. You hide your eyes from the light for just a second as you continue to fly through the storm.

The rain seemed to be falling so slowly with a short pause between each drop. You felt that you could fly around each one moving before you were hit like a game of air dodgeball with the rain.

The wind bounced the craft swooping it slowly and up a dropping it quickly down like a rollercoaster in a sky carnival.

Segment 4

Do you want to fly over Mountains, the ocean, Dessert or a City?

The tops of the mountains look like they are reaching up to touch your craft as you fly over.

The waves of the ocean seem to be playing a game of hide-n-seek. Peeking up out of the water and ducking back under. A bright shape appears in the waves and you want a closer look.

The view of the dessert from your plane was not very exciting, just a big sandbox with no toys in it to play with. But wait your co-pilot spots some interesting animal tracks. Something you guys have never seen before!

As you near the city the tall buildings stand together like a parade waiting to begin their march.

Segment 5

Compete Scenario from choices

Let's go on an adventure like the first African-American woman pilot Bessie Coleman.

The old runway feels crumbly underneath the wheels of your plane. As you take off you hear the crunching of the pebbles as your plane picks up speed.

Your plane lifts off the runway. The long wings stretching out across the sky like an eagle. Your plan soars and circles high in the air.

The sky seemed painted in sunshine today. With sunlight filling each cloud like a bright light bulb.

As you near the city you see the tall buildings stand together like a parade waiting to begin their march.

Let's pretend, like Bessie, that you are performing at an airshow! You expertly control your plane as you roll it spinning around and around as you fly higher. You pitch the nose of your plane down diving toward the earth. You just had the best idea for a new trick! What will you do?
